Sport is an inseparable part of university life. At Charles University, it has enjoyed a long tradition and our graduates and students have scored many sporting victories. Success, however, is not the only objective of sport. The oft-quoted saying mens sana in corpore sano says it all. It is only fitting that Charles University students and staff should benefit from a wide range of sporting opportunities.

Running with Those That Can’t

The charity Running with Those That Can’t (RWTTC) was founded by students of Charles University’s Third Faculty of Medicine. The founders believe that philanthropy and willingness to help others is the starting point for becoming better students, better people and better doctors. Their intention was to bring down the social taboos which surround people with disabilities in the Czech Republic and help them live a longer, happier and more satisfying life. The traditional partner of RWTTC is Charles University’s Third Faculty of Medicine in Prague. Together the organizers strive to help children with disabilities become integrated into society and to achieve increasing public awareness of their special needs. The run is one of the events held as part of the Prague International Marathon.
